New Mexico's Teacher Salaries Among Lowest in the Nation

Washington, D.C.—New Mexico ranked 46th in the nation for its average teacher salary in 2002-03, according to the annual teacher salary survey released by the American Federation of Teachers on Thursday.

New Mexico's 2002-03 average starting salary was $37,054, up 0.9 percent from the previous year, placing the state 46th in the nation. New Mexico ranked 31st for its average beginning salary, which was $28,120, up 2 percent from the year before. The AFT estimates that the state's average beginning teacher pay for the most recent school year, 2003-04, was $29,020.

New Mexico, in the 46th spot, trailed its neighboring states for average teacher salary: Colorado was 22nd at $42,679; Texas was 30th, at $39,972; and Arizona was 31st, at $39,955.

Across the country, teachers' salaries remained relatively stagnant while their share of health benefits rose at all-time high rates, making it difficult to attract and keep good teachers at a time when they are increasingly needed, the report said.

Nationally, the 2002-03 average teacher salary, which is the most recent figure available, was $45,771 up 3.3 percent from the previous year. The average beginning teacher salary was $29,564, up 3.2 percent from the year before. But AFT's report noted that teachers' share of health insurance costs spiked an average 13 percent, according to the Bureau of Labor Statistics.

"Exorbitant health insurance costs are taking an intolerable bite out of already inadequate teacher salaries. Teachers are being asked to do more, shortages persist in the most challenging areas to teach, yet compensation packages are insulting," said AFT Secretary-Treasurer Edward J. McElroy.

Furthermore, the AFT noted, superintendents' average salaries are as much as four times higher than teachers' average pay. "States and school districts are crying poverty when it comes to teachers' pay yet somehow find money for extravagant administrator salaries," McElroy said.

California led the nation with the highest average teacher salary for 2002-03, at $55,693. South Dakota had the nation's lowest average teacher salary, at $32,414. Alaska led the nation with the highest average beginning teacher salary for 2002-03, at $37,401. Montana had the nation's lowest average beginning teacher salary, at $23,052.
