Rhode Island Places Seventh in Nation for Its Teacher Salaries

Washington, D.C. – Rhode Island ranked seventh in the nation for its average teacher salary in 2002-03, but dropped to 19th place for its beginning teacher salary, according to the American Federation of Teachers' annual teacher salary survey released Thursday.

Rhode Island ranked 7th in the nation for its 2002-03 average teacher salary, which was $52,879, up 2.4 percent from the previous year. Rhode Island ranked 19th for its average beginning teacher salary, at $31,025, up 2.5 percent from the year before. The AFT estimates that Rhode Island's average starting salary for the most recent school year, 2003-04, was $32,018.

Regionally, Rhode Island outranked Massachusetts, which was 8th, at $51,942; and Vermont which was 24th, at $42,038. However, Connecticut came in 3rd, at $53,962.

Across the country, teachers' salaries remained relatively stagnant while their share of health benefits rose at all-time rates, making it difficult to attract and keep good teachers at a time when they are increasingly needed, the report said.

Nationally, the 2002-03 average teacher salary, which is the most recent figures available, was $45,771, up 3.3 percent from the previous year, and the average beginning teacher salary was $29,564, up 3.2 percent from the previous year. But AFT's report noted that teachers' share of health insurance costs spiked an average 13 percent, according to the Bureau of Labor Statistics.

"Exorbitant health insurance costs are taking an intolerable bite out of already inadequate teacher salaries. Teachers are being asked to do more, shortages persist in the most challenging areas to teach, yet compensation packages are insulting," said AFT Secretary-Treasurer Edward J. McElroy.

Furthermore, the AFT noted, superintendents' average salaries are as much as four times higher than teachers' average pay. "States and school districts are crying poverty when it comes to teachers' pay yet somehow find money for extravagant administrator salaries," McElroy said.

California led the nation with the highest average teacher salary for 2002-03, at $55,693. South Dakota had the nation's lowest average teacher salary, at $32,414. Alaska led the nation with the highest average beginning teacher salary for 2002-03, at $37,401. Montana had the nation's lowest average beginning teacher salary, at $23,052.
